

Begin your NICE experience with a tour of the beautiful University of Tennessee campus

Planners of the 2010 National Institute on Cooperative Education (NICE) are giving you and other participants a wonderful opportunity to take a one-hour tour so you and the other participants can see what the beautiful and historic UT campus in Knoxville has to offer.

Tours are planned for 2 p.m., 3 p.m., and 4 p.m. on Saturday afternoon, July 17. Please check the appropriate box on your NICE registration form to make a reservation for the tour time you prefer. Each tour will start and end at Morrill Hall, where you'll be staying.

Of course, you won't be able to cover the entire 500-acre campus or visit all the 220 buildings on campus in an hour, but a friendly, knowledgeable UT Ambassador will conduct your tour to show you the highlights.

Here's a sampling of sites you'll see:

- Landmarks such as Ayers Hall and Frank H. McClung Museum.
- Neyland Stadium, where more than 100,000 football fans show up on game day to cheer on the Tennessee Vols.
- Thompson-Boling Arena, where the Vols and Lady Vols pack the stands for basketball games.
- The Torchbearer statue that stands in Circle Park as a symbol of the commitment UT has to providing exceptional education programs to its students and service to the community.
- The "official" UT Bookstore where you'll be able to purchase souvenirs and mementos for yourself as well as gifts for family and friends.

The campus tour will be the perfect beginning for your exciting and memorable NICE experience at UT. Remember to indicate the tour time you prefer on your NICE registration form.

We look forward to seeing you in Knoxville!
